Downtown Blaze Finally Flee Dempsey Rooms;

MACON, Ga., April 10 .-(AP)-Flames of undetermined origin tonight destroyed top floors of the Morris Putzel, Inc., store and the R. S. Thorpe & Sons Company and damaged the nine-story Hotel Dempsey building.

Thousands of persons jammed. Cherry street, the main business thoroughfare, to view the most spectacular fire here since the seven-story Citizens & Southern National Bank building was destroyed at Third and Cherry streets-half a block away-in 1933. Fire Chief T. E. Dellinger estimated total damage at $75,000.

Officials of the Hotel Dempsey declared smoke and water caused about $5,000 damage.

Guests Leave Rooms At the fire's height about 10 p. m., long yellow flames licked ominously from the windows of two burning buildings and swept in clouds of grey smoke up the north side of the nine-story hotel building, momentarily catching several window sashes on upper

"IF THERE'S NO WAR."

President Roosevelt, leaving Warm Springs, Ga., after a 10-day stay, teld crowds which gathered around his train at the depot that he would be back in the fall, "if there's no war."

Observers in Washington have reported, in recent days, that the President not only believes war will come, but is also convinced the United States will be a participant. To this belief is attributed the unprecedented lack of interest in domestic problems on the part of the nation's chief executive. He feels no enthusiasm, it is stated, for further reform plans, for business appeasement or for any other purely home problems, because, when war comes, everything will be changed and a national war economy would replace not only the New Deal, but every other economic factor in American affairs.

It is perhaps fortunate that, should such a catastrophe as United States participation in a new World War come about, most of the program undertaken would have to win the sanction of congress before it could be placed in effect. For some of the details of the alreadyplanned wartime program by the administration are so drastic and so far-fetched that this country would itself become a dictatorship in the most vital items.

For instance, it is reported that the administration would, in event of war, seek to monetize all gold and silver stocks in this country. issuing this new money instead of bonds to finance the war. Such a step would inevitably bring quick devaluation of American currency with all the economic disruption that must accompany such a development. It would throw America into a quagmire of poverty just at the time when her national safety upon stability.

Another part of the program calls for fixation of prices. With depreciating currency this would but lead to greater and greater confusion. Likewise, fixed prices must be accompanied by fixed wage levels-a development that, under a depreciating currency, labor would never ap-

Still another part of the plan is government acquisition of ownership of all Federal Reserve Banks. A long step toward dictatorship, in that

These are but a few of the things proposed. That they would be necessary for prosecution of the expected war is hardly likely. America need not surrender democracy in order to overcome an enemy of any size or strength.

It is reasonably safe to assume, however, that congress would retain sufficient understanding of the verities of American ideals not to permit any extreme violations of freedomeven in time of war.

INVENTING THINGS

Undoubtedly not all the needed gadgets to make life easier on this planet have yet been provided. Although, at times, it doubtless seems to the authorities in Washington that nothing remains to be invented which has not already been patented. The United States patent office continues to be swamped with the annual deluge of new things as well as improvements upon the old.

Rat traps have been a source of inspiration to inventors ever since the animals came out of the ark-two by two. Recently, two improvements, both apparently designed to comply with the latest humane instincts, have been patented. One of these should be particularly appealing to western mice. It lassoes the mouse instead of squashing him. But it is questionable whether the new rat trap which shoots a dart through the rat instead of breaking the poor rodent's neck or preserving it intact for drowning, will be regarded with a great deal of favor in ratland

If the newly invented money bag which, when snatched from the messenger's hand, administers an electric shock, sets off a tear gas bomb and sends out a radio alarm, could only whip out a club and knock down the thief, it would doubtless reduce the incidental confusion to a considerable extent. As the newly invented gadgets flow in, of course, the old ones must be moved out. Storage facilities in the patent office are limited Recently, a man with a hobby for buying up old patents acquired 3,251 barrels and boxes filled rith unindexed models—a sort of pig in a poke. Among the first 100 packages opened was discovered the original model of the Gatling gun, bly the first successful machine gun inbably the first successful limited. Tucked away in a nook of an old safe nd an application for a patent to reduce sea sickness, to make ships more buoyant. It was dated in 1849. The applicant was a country boy from Illinois. LIFE EXPECTANCY

If Georgians today enjoy a life expectancy of 61 years, as reported by the Medical Association of Georgia, can it be possible the promoters of the series of World's Fairs in the United States are partially to be credited?

Statisticians for a life insurance company have delved into the question of longevity as related to the world's fairs, starting with the Crystal Palace exposition in New York in 1853when Forty-second street was 'way out in the country and the fair site considered inconvenlent to reach.

Life expectancy in 1853 was 38 years for white males at birth. By the time of the Centennial World's Fair in 1876, four years had been added. But in the 17 years between the Centennial and the Columbian World's Fair in 1893, little progress had been made, despite the fact that the great fundamental discoveries of bacteriology of Pasteur, Koch and others had been made in that period. The results were shown, however, in the 11 years between the Columbian and Louisiana Purchase world fairs. with the life expectancy jumping from 42 years to 48.2 years in 1904. By the time of the Panama-Pacific exposition in 1915 the figure stood at 53 years. In 1933, the year of the Chicago World's Fair, it was 60.5 years and in 1939, with two world's fairs vieing for public favor, it stands at 61.5 years. Some other figures place it at 62 years. But what are six months at a time like this?

By the time of the next world's fair-say the Dixie World's Fair in Atlanta in 1945-it stands to be much highter. With the full success of derivatives of the miracle drug, sulfanilimide, yet to be felt, and with the myriad other great medical discoveries of the last few years barely emerging from the experiment stage, it may be that an advance as great as that of the 1893-1904 period will be shown.

These statistical studies have another lesson for Georgians which far outweigh the national gains. It is estimated that Georgians today have a life expectancy of 61 years—one year under the national average by one set of studies and six months by the other. The reason lies in the expanded services of the health departments of the state and of the comparatively few counties supporting such work-for it has not always been the case.

Generally speaking, Georgia has ranked well below the national average because of an almost total neglect of health functions, a mistake which the urge and necessity for economy bids fair to repeat. The diseases susceptible to public health work will spread again unless the fight is waged with constant strength. Death does not wait upon taxes and legislatures, nor does it respect poverty or riches.

Georgians actually should have a life expectancy greater than that of the other sections of the country, yet such will not be the case until and unless diseases controllable by public health work are brought to their minimum. Money and an enlightened citizenry are the necessary ingredients. The money is returned a thousand-fold.

COLLEGIATE EXHIBITIONISM It is with a feeling of doubt that the subject of the current collegiate rage, the gulping of goldfish and that abomination, the sophomoric invention, the eating of reptiles, is approached. It may be that exhibitionism has reached its fullest flower in collegiate halls with the current manhandling of defenseless creatures. But, remembering the hope with which the world looks to youth, there is doubt of the wisdom of those who would repose their faith in these "wise fools."

But before getting too wrought up about the subject, it may be well to hark back to the days when collegiate fancies turned in still other. and no more sensible, directions. Such as the carting of a wagon, mule and all, to the roof of the academic hall; the dangling of biology lab skeletons from the unreachable center of radio antenna; the raiding of other campuses, preferably feminine, for decorative construction; the 2 a. m. setting in full cry of bells with a range of miles on the stilly nights of autumn. Some certain college authorities would still like to place hands upon the perpetrators of these dastardly deeds! Despite the passage of time and the putting aside of foolish things, these are unforgettable memories for more than one "wise fool"

True, they were a little more original and infinitely more troublesome to the many than the current craze, but at the same time they represent a manifestation without which no college generation can exist. College tends toward the repression of youthful exuberance, which nonetheless must have its escape mech-

And while the youngsters may disgust their elders with their antics, they actually do little except provide a memory to be recalled with a "those-were-the-days" sigh-even as you and I.

(From the Dallas Morning News.)
There is some substance in the argument of the Rev. Edward Keller, of Notre Dame, that the very nature of the physical assets of this nation makes impossible the wealth concentration that has been claimed as a result of some of the researches of economists recently. Very frequently one sees the statement that 1 per cent of the population owns more than half the wealth of the a claim, and the person who honestly makes such a statement does not fully comprehend the na-ture of wealth. Thus far the Notre Dame pro-

However, he does some wishful thinking on his side of the subject by failing to see some very pertinent facts. One does not have to investigate very far into the nature of wealth to discover that it may be variously defined, and further that the factor to be considered in a study of the political and economic aspects of wealth concentration is not wealth itself but the power and privileges attached to its holding. This power may be very great in comparison with a relatively small holding of wealth. Under other circumstances, it may be small as related to a very large holding of be small as related to a very large holdi

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

NEW DEAL SPECIMEN WASHINGTON, April 10.—Last week the senate was afflicted by a singular puzzle. Senator Lynn J. Frazier, of North Dakota, is a big, shambling, rather inarticulate fellow, who confines his rare public utterances to laments for the farmers of his state. He scarcely knows William O. Douglas by sight. Yet, when Douglas' name came up for confirmation to the supreme court, Frazier burst into a long tirade, charging the new justice with all sorts of improbable crimes and misdemeanors. In his anger, he even trightened his audience with a threat to make the same speech twice over.

The puzzle's solution is particularly worth recording, for it displays in action an interesting New Deal specimen. The man is Max Lowenhtal, counsel to the special railroad investigation committee of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana. Lowenthal's personal dislike, for Douglas was what galvanized Senator Frazier into unaccustomed oratory.

The incident casts a certain light on the street of the senator frazier into unaccustomed oratory. NEW DEAL SPECIMEN WASHINGTON, April 10.—Last week

The incident casts a certain light on the Washington world. Both Lowenthal and Douglas are important New Dealers, and were once friends. Just when Lowenthal formed his dislike for Douglas rerriends. Just when Lowenthal formed his dislike for Douglas remains a mystery. At any rate, though not reciprocated, it was violent, and when Douglas' name was first mentioned for the court place, found expression in a perfectly baseless propaganda against Douglas. One or two snide references to Douglas as "not quite a liberal" in influential left-wing papers are believed to have been inspired by Lowenthal. Then, when the President named Douglas I among the president page 1 and 1 a las, Lawenthal set out to prevent confirmation. Presumably he went first to his patron, Senator Wheeler, and was turned down there. At any rate, the Republican senate leadership was approached without result. And finally, as a last resort, the task of attacking Douglas was planted on poor Frazier, whose close friend-ship with Wheeler made him more accessible to Lowenthal.

MOCK-TURTLE The story is unpleasant, yet its hero can boast an unusual record of disinterested public service. You would know Lowenthal for an idealist, narrow and suspicious perhaps, but still well-intentioned, the moment you set eyes on him. He is a slight, short figure, always clothed in dark, old-fashioned clothes, always wearing old-fashioned brown boots. His fashioned clothes, always wearing old-fashioned brown boots. His face has the large, doleful eyes and the kindly but mournfully intense expression of Tenniel's mock-turtle in "Alice in Wonderland." torrential talker.

By now Lowentha is so familiar a figure in Washington that one might think him a permanent fixture. Actually, he spent most of his early life making a comfortable fortune as a lawyer, specializing in representing minority interests in corporate reorganizations. It was only when he had enough money to be independent that he retired from practice, to become a sort of advocate of the general public

He entered the New Deal via the Pecora stock market investigation, in which he played a distinguished part as one of Pecora's best assistants. It was he who set Tom Corcoran and Ben Coh to work on the securities and exchange act of 1934, entirely on his own initiative, when all the New Deal, including the President, seemed to see no need for such legislation. Then, when the Pecora investigation ended, he transferred to the Wheeler railroad inquiry, in which he has been the moving spirit.

Among the New Dealers, he has always been more important and influential than his official position would indicate. Through his wife, a relative of Judge Mack, he long ago formed friendships with Justice Felix Frankfurter and Ben Cohen. Throughout the New Deal period he has been often consulted on important plans and measures. At times he has served as a New Deal watch of the hill, sifting legislation, and catching jokers. Lobbyists hate him, and business men think him unfair. The businessmen are probably right, for he is always prone to attribute evil motives to those who disagree with him. His strange judgment of Douglas, whom he accuses of being pro-Wall Street, is thought to originate in a GOOD AND BAD Such is Lowenthal. Put the man and his record together with the petty, vindictive story of his attack on Bill Douglas, and you will have a fair commentary on the New Deal itself. The good qualities are ability, disinterestedness and hard, forward-looking work. The bad ones are suspicion and self-righteousness. Unfortunately, the bad qualities will often counteract the good, in the New Deal's case as well as in Lowenthal's.

Economic War By HUGH S. JOHNSON.

Innocent WASHINGTON,
D. C., April 10.—
"China," says Dr. Wang Chung-hui, Chinese foreign ninister, "could win the war (against Japan) if the United States would apply neutrality measures distinguishing between the aggressor and the victim."

Here is innocently exposed the blatant bunk that is being pro osed in the hearings on the trality" bill. Wang simply says that, if the United States will get into war against Japan on the economic side, China can lick Japan on the military side.

Our sympathy is strong for China but, our wish to keep out of war is stronger. The wish of Sino-Japanese war on the side of Wang does not stand alone, Mr Walter Lippman is deserting his usual pontifical ponderosity to get positively hysterical against senators who do not believe in giving the President power to use embar goes and economic sanction against unfavored nations. His ar tument is that perhaps the Presi dent could thus prevent war be tween foreign nations. He sug-gests that, if there is another World War, we can't keep out of it and therefore that we ought to get into economic war to keep out of military war.

Cockeyed He says that, Argument these senators do not let the President have power to prevent foreign war in this way, then it is up to them to show us another way or else" . . . confess that they do not know how to prevent war-they are denying the President his con titutional authority and constitu ional responsibilities in conduct ing relations." The whole argument is petulantly cockeyed but that last quotation is completely

ONE WORD MORE By RALPH McGILL.

WITHOUT REALITY Sitting here on a very beautiful Monday afternoon, the typewriter before me, there comes on a feeling of unreality. Was it just Saturday morning when I sat in a box in Mexico City's great opera house and watched a pageant of Mexico by dancers, singers and musicians? Was it just last Saturday afternoon we rode on flower-bedecked barges up the old canals of ancient Xochimilco which the Aztecs knew, with flower boats and musicians about us? Was it just Sunday afternoon we rode on the saturday afternoon we rode on the saturday afternoon which the Aztecs knew, with flower boats and musicians about us? Was it just Sunday afternoon was a saturday afternoon. day noon our plane took off from Mexico City's great airport and landed us, just 10 hours and 20 minutes later, in Atlanta so we might go home and be in bed asleep in much less than 12 hours after leaving Mexico City?

Were those only mirages, those pleasant airports which they said were at Brownsville and at Houston, Texas? Was all the singing and the laughter and the music and the fun part of a dream, or did we, starting Thursday morning from Atlanta, spend three nights and almost three full days in Mexico City, travel about 3,200 miles, and arrive back in Atlanta Sunday night?

The sound of the bare feet of the Yaqui Indians, dancing the "corn dance" and the "deer dance" on the stage of the opera, still is in my ears; the laughter of a dancing girl from a southern state of Mexico, rings through the opera; the sound of the crowing roosters put down in one of the dances, reverberates in the ears, and one hears again the delighted laughter of the ground. A plane one hears again the delighted laughter of the crowd. A can make magic; the magic carpet of Bagdad comes to life.

I never liked the sound of a ticking clock in a room at night. It seems to reach out and pound on the ears, saying: "Listen, I am eternity ticking. Every time I tick a part of your life is gone." So I like no ticking clocks. That is why, I think, I like a long ne trip. It breaks the pattern and crowds out with its speed the PEOPLE AND KINDNESS Mexican people universally were kind to the visitors. The officials went far beyond the usual courtesies. The plain people, with no official connection, were the same. The one touch of flying to their country with a plane which originated in New York city seemed to make the two nations and the two people kin. It was, to Mexico, an event which bulked large in their imagination.

In the afternoon party at Xochimilco the crowded canals were in friendly mood. The poorest family, with enough to hire a boat and eat a few tortillas and beans, waved and smiled at our gay

ONE OF THE PROBLEMS A newspaperman twenty years in Mexico said: "One of the problems of Mexico is that she has no middle class. The Indians, or peons, were held in what amounted to slavery. They were not educated. They were little more than hewers of wood and drawers

"One great factor in the success of any country, notably England and America, has been the middle class which kept the nations stable. Mexico hasn't one. So, today, she has the problem of great poverty in a land rich in minerals, silver, gold and in oil and other raw materials of value. She has a great illiterate population and great agrarian troubles. The mistakes that have been made have hurt as they have in the United States. But there you have more absorption power. Here there is no middle class leaven in the bread of humanity." This was a part of the talk. It sounded reasonable then, sitting about a cafe table. It does now, two days later and 1,600 miles severe Sierra Madre mountains, one of the party from Houston took charge as toastmaster. He proposed a toast to Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, which was drunk in sparkling water.

One of the party from Atlanta then proposed that the trip had been agony for three members of the party. They, a congressman and two mayors, had heard speeches and more speeches and had not been called upon. Therefore, it was resolved they should speak.

And so, at 14,000 feet in the air, Mayor Bill Hartsfield, of Atlantain Mayor Bill Hartsfield, of Atlan ta; Mayor Ben Douglas, of Charlotte, and Congressman Bob Ramspeck, made speeches, standing at one end of the plane.

"I have made speeches in many places," said Bob Ramspeck, "but I'll be doggoned if I don't believe this is the first time I've ever made one in an airplane 14,000 feet in the air traveling 185

One thing is sure, Aviation has grown in 12 years from nothing to a gigantic industry which is spanning oceans, continents and linking continents and nations together. Atlanta is the hub of this section. There must be a real airport built at Candler field—one with runways to take care of the ships of the future which will make the giant, sleek liners of today, small and slow.

The Rule Must Be Vile If the Umpire Needs a Gun to Enforce It

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

How long should we tolerate the intolerant? Let us suppose that a score of people in your town should rent a vacant lot in the business section, install a loudspeaker, and begin a continuous ranting against all things American. Suppose they should cry in endless repetition: "You are fools to endure they should cry in endless repetition: "You are fools to this government! Your officials are rogues; your constitution is the work of imbeciles, and your flag is a symbol of shame! There is no insult more vile than to be called an American! End this disgrace! Arm yourselves with guns and torches and join us in overthrowing the government!"

What would happen? Would people listen in polite silence? Would they merely laugh and jeer?

Our people are not patient when their emotions are stirred.

Our people are not patient when their emotions are stirred. Some of them would do no more than protest to officials and newspapers, but the greater number would make more direct criticism. There would be a riot, and the speakers would be fortunate to with bruises. Would that prove that we no longer have free speech?

Suppose, then, that your town's officials, to avoid certain class of voters or to demonstrate America's should provide police protection for the speakers and surro them with armed guards to keep the crowd at bay.

Would that prove that we do have free speech?

Free speech is a natural right, possessed by all, but a right becomes a wrong when abused. Our libel laws, approved by common sense and the public conscience, establish the principle that the right of free speech does not include the right to injure others.

Where, then, shall we draw the line?

where, then, shall we draw the line?

Perhaps no general rule can answer the question. But this much is certain, that speech offensive and harmful to the ideals of a whole people, and destructive of their most sacred institutions, is not a right but an intolerable wrong.

As the will of the people, in the last analysis, is the law, so the conscience of the people determines the right and wrong of behavior.

The individual's right of free speech is supported by public opinion, so long as he does no violence to the accepted standards of decency, and he needs no police protection.

If he does need protection from decent people, it is prima facie evidence that his speech is indecent.

When officials lean backward to defend the letter of the law, and in the name of free speech give their protection to speech that offends and endangers the people, they are violating the spirit of the law and thus destroying it.

Reading again the other night Andre Maurois' "Disraeli," it was interesting to learn that when Sir Robert Peel changed the British Tory party's name to "Conserva-tiive" in 1833, he had in mind a use of the word "conservative" as ing "anti-reactionary." Things need to be conserved against reaction as well as against radicalism, against the extreme right as well as against the extreme left, and the point is even more important today than it was in Peel's day. The good things in the New Deal, for example, need conserving not only against radi-cals who would continue the dealing disastrously, but against an old guard which would return to the pre-1929 era.

To Disraeli, writes Maurois, "the whole issue of ... politics was be-tween a historic school and a hic school; he chose history. A country is not an ab-stract being whose rights can be deduced by a plain mental process. A nation is a work of art, and a work wrought by time. It has a temperament like that of an individual. The greatness of England in particular is sprung, not from its natural resources, which are mediocre, but from its institutions. The rights of Englishmen are older by five full cen-turies than the rights of man..."

"It seemed to him that the duty of a conservative leader was to have the courage to defend the past in so far as it was living and likely to live, but also to sweep the party clean of prejudices an outworn principles, and above all to guide it boldly in the direction of a generous policy, inspired by love of the ordinary, common people and capable of conquering

By LOUIE D. NEWTON. YOUTH, O YOUTH!

Parade that most impressed you? Did you stop with merely looking at the new modes of dress and the fine array of new things to wear? Did you? I hasten to answer my own question by saying that I got a new vision of youth on Easter, I was most impressed on Easter Sunday by the glorious spectacle of youth. Frankly, I couldn't now tell you how one of them was dressed, except that they all looked stylish enough. I would not imply indifference to their new frocks and suits, but what impressed me were those faces-those bright, expectant eyesthose vibrant, singing voices— those buoyant, pulsing bodies— those eager, questful minds—those reverent, sensitive souls! I was impressed with the prophecy and promise of that great throng of youth that I saw Easter Sunday-the promise of tomorrow's leadership, tomorrow's constituency, tomorrow itself. I was impressed with the loyalty of that splendid company of youth on Easter Sunday—unselfish, sacrificial loyalty. I was impressed with the ability of that great Easter army of youth-inherited, developed, resourceful ability. Dwelling at length in prayerful gratitude for this Easter impression of youth, I came upon this striking little poem:

"Youth, O youth! Can I reach you Can I speak and make you hear? Can I open your eyes to see Me, Can My presence draw you near?

Is there a prophet among you— One with a heart to know? I will flash My secrets on him, He shall watch My glory grow.

For I, the God, the Father, The Quest, the Final Goal, Still search for a prophet among you, To speak My Word in his soul."

What shall be our answer to the challenge of youth? What shall be our answer to the high summons of God to help Him reach youth? What shall be the answer of parents? What shall be the answer of the church? What shall be the answer of the school? The

TYPEWRITER EXPER TESTIFIES AT TRIAI

Asserts Machine Sent to Man's Room Made 'False Radiogram.'

Testimony that a typewriter used to write a "fake radiogram" ordering payment of $1,690 for two pounds of lump sugar was the same machine sent to Phillip Cordovano's room at a local hotel highlighted the opening of Corlovano's trial yesterday on charges of larceny after trust.

Francis R. Hoyt, Decatur typewriter expert, identified the writng as the same as that of the machine sent to Cordovano's room. and insisted that the message was fake.

Cordovano's wife also is under indictment in connection with the case in which Andre Wallach, Atanta business man, is alleged to have been fleeced of $1,690. U. A. Rice, Wallach's secretary, is said to have made the payment in accordance with instructions in the radiogram and received the package—thus paying $845 a pound for the sugar.

Quincy Arnold, assistant solicitor general prosecuting the case, was attempting to prove that Cordovano delivered the package and received the money, while defense attorneys, James R. Venable and B. J. Dantone, indicated they will dictment in connection with the was the man who engineered the deal. While both Cordovano and his wife are under indictment the cases were severed by Judge Eugene D. Thomas of the Fultor county court, and Cordovano faced the jury alone.

The case was recessed during the afternoon and the jury under agreement of counsel, was permitted to disperse for the night.

Trial of Dr. F. J. Guiffrida, charged with performing illegal operations, also was recessed until this morning.

EASTERN AIR LINE MECHANICS CALL

Employes Seek To Force Recognition of Union and Obtain Raise in Wage Scale by Strike.

A strike of all Eastern Air Line mechanics at Candler Field and at four other key points on the company's system has been called for 11:01 o'clock Friday night, Atlanta time, it was announced yesterday by A. P. Martin, president of the Air Line Mechanics' Association.

Letters have been sent to all local members of the union giving explicit instructions about the walkout and the Post Office Department, the Civil Aeronautics Authority and the National Mediation Board have been notified. A spokesman for the local union with a membership of 12 Eastern Air Line employes, said last night the strike was to force recognition and raise th ewage scale. It was ordered only after a complete breakdown of negotiations be-tween a mediation board and Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, Eastern Air president, he declared.

The union, which is not affiliated either with the CIO or the AFL, claims 100 per cent member-ship here, at Newark, Washington and Chicago and at least 80 per cent at Miami.

All points will be affected by the walkout, it was claimed, and operations of Eastern, second largest system in the country, probably will be paralyzed unless the government intervenes.

GEORGIA LOSES ITS 'THIRD' REPRESENTATIVE IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, April 10. - In the death of Senator James Hamwheelhorse from Illinois, Georgia lost its "third" member in the upper chamber.

It was at Augusta that he obtained his primary schooling, while from Savannah he gained his wife, Rose Lawton Douglas, who was with him when he died yesterday.

With so many close associations having their origin in the state Senator Lewis naturally looked upon Georgia as his second home and always maintained a keen in terest in affairs of the state.

Many stories are told of his ear-ly residence in Savannah, why he came to leave the coastal city and a memorale return visit he made after a lapse of some years. One of the best versions, which seems to be well authenticated, has it that he found himself in a multiplicity of difficulties as a gay young blade just sprouting pink whiskers that later were to become world fam-ous. Burdened with heavy per-sonal obligations which he found himself unable to meet he is supposed to have consulted an older member of a firm with which he was identified and there was given the advice to go as far away as he could. His benefactor succeeded in getting a railroad pass for his young friend to Seattle, Washing-

Returns In the Money. Returning to Savannah a few years later with his pockets bulging with gold he took up a suite at the DeSoto hotel and inserted

News which announced in effect that James Hamilton Lewis was in the city for a brief stay and would be glad to receive a statement from all of his former creditors. To the flow of callers who be-seiged him he is said not to have quibbled over the amount of any claim, paying all bills as presented.

Another version is that he hired from a livery stable a resplendant carriage drawn by the finest team of white horses to be found, with coachman to match, and equipped thus proceeded to call personally on his creditors, paying them off with a flourish as he went.

Something of the same flourish characterized his entire career. He was the most fastidious dresse perhaps ever to sit in the senate begarbed like a summer rainbow as the late Czar Reed, speaker o the house when Lewis served there as a congressman-at-large from the state of Washington, once described him.
Chicago Rise.

When he left Seattle to try his fortunes in Chicago, he carried with him a wardrobe that made the city gasp. Two years later he was made corporation counsel, and in 1912 he came to the senate. The most polite of all men, he had a habit even of removing his hat in a telephone booth when he learned that his caller was a lady. Constantly accosted by persons recognizing him on the streets, he seemed always to find time to stop for a brief chat-often doubtlessly without being certain whom he was greeting. And yesterday upon entering the hospital shortly before he died he paused to exchange greetings with an old friend passing him in the lobby.

The five little fellows at the top, eight-week-old Shetland sheepdog pup-pies, are too young to flash their form in the 27th annual Atlanta Kennel Club dog show Friday and Saturday, but wait until next year! The Shetland sheepdog, sometimes confused with the old English sheepdog, is thought to be a much larger dog than it really is. The "Sheltie" is a collie in miniature, so to speak, smaller than fox terriers or Scotties. His average height is about 14 inches. In the picture below, a full-grown Shetland sheep-dog is placed on a bench beside a setter to show the comparative size. The Timberidge Kennels, of Austell, have entered several Shetland sheepdogs in the show.

The initiation fee finally dropped to a dime "and not a penny less," Larry Miller, charter member of the Bluebirds, decreed after con-sulting with Dick Niehaus, Crack-er coach and trainer who is president of the Bluebirds.

At this price Traffic Club members flocked into the order of Bluebirds and Niehaus and Miller

The Cracker Glee Club includes Alf Anderson, Marshall Mauldin, Larry Miller, Lester Burge, and Onnie Robinson. They sang the songs college boys sing late at night, on the lawns of their fra-ternity houses as they drink beer.

Alf strapped on the accordion one of the musicians put down and squeezed out the University of Georgia Alma Mater. Les Burge picked up a guitar (pronounced git-tar) and started strumming out some music.

Before the fun started there were short talks by Major Tram-mell Scott, Paul Richards and Earl Mann. Mann introduced the ball players and some of them said a word or two. Richards said the club was 50 per cent stronger than at this time last year, but was quick to point out this did not mean the team now is 50 per cent stronger than the Crackers at the close of last season. Richards praised the hustle of his team.

The Traffic Club is one of the town's big boosters of the Crackers. They bought 200 tickets for opening day Friday. The club's officers are J. W. Mahanay, presidents of the company of th dent, who acted as master of cere-monies; L. M. Balliet and E. L. Setzer, vice presidents, and O. G. Waring, secretary.

Henrich Hits Game's Lone Homer; Di Maggio Fails To Connect.

By TOM McRAE.

It must not have reached the Daffiness Boys that their neighbors, the New York Yankees, are the world champions, for the Dodgers showed no respect for them as they pounded out a 13-5 victory yesterday at Ponce de Leon.

The crowd of 2,867 which turned out to see Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig knock one out of the park was sadly disappointed, but they saw Freddie Sington, an Atlanta boy with Brooklyn, hit a triple and double and drive in triple and double and drive in five runs.

And the only home run of the day came from the bat of Tommy Henrich, the Yankee right fielder, who was with New Orleans a couple of seasons back. George Selkirk led the hitting with a triple, double and single, and Dolph Camilli and Red Rolfe each drove out two singles and a double.

Red Evans, with New Orleans last year, went the route for the Daffiness Boys and the Yankees touched him for at least one hit each inning. The Yanks put two hits together in the third and seventh to push acceptance. to push across two runs in innings.

Joe Di Maggio was a flopperoo at the plate but gave the fans an exhibition in handling fly balls and how to return them to the infield. URGED IN SCHOOLS

McSwain Attacks Neglect of Poor in Opening Child Education Parley.

An urgent appeal for the application of democratic ideals to the school and to the home in order to preserve democracy opened the forty-sixth annual convention of the Association for Childhood Education here last night.

Speaking at the First Baptist church before more than 1,000 delegates, Dr. E. T. McSwain, associate professor of education at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., declared that the future status of democracy now and in the future rests both with adults and with children.

Poor Housing Cited.

"We can no longer ignore without serious consequences the fact that far too many children in America do not have sufficient nourishment, adequate clothing or decent housing facilities. Demoralization, crime, delinquency and Speaking at the First Baptist

As we try to apply the ideals of democracy that we talk so glibly about we should strive so gibly about we should strive in every way possible to offer equal, but not necessarily identical, educational opportunities."

Choir Gives Concert.

Miss Mamie Heinz, general chairman of the Atlanta convention committee, presided at the opening session which began with a concert by the A Capella choir under the direction of Haskell

Boyter.
Dr. Ellis A. Fuller pronounced the invocation and address of welcome were made by Mayor Hartsfield, Jere A. Wells, county school superintendent, and Dr. Willis A. Sutton, city school superintendent. The response was by Miss Jennie Wahlert, of St. Louis, national president, who also introduced Dr. McSwain.

The convention will continue through Friday and the program for the most part will consist of smaller study groups rather than general meetings. All sessions will

"Easter greetings, and a review of 'The Bible Comes Alive.' by Sir Charles Marston. This significant volume, containing the latest discoveries of archaeology in the Holy Land, brings a spiritual message as appropriate to the season as its title." Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Fink enter-tain ct a buffet supper at their home on Cumberland road for their son, Walter C. Fink Jr., and his fiancee, Miss Eleanor Jordan, preceding their wed-ding rehearsal.

Inclosed with the greeting is P, W. Wilson's interesting review of "The Bible Comes Alive," reprinted from "The Presbyterian" of last February 2.

As you know, Sir Charles is Adrienne's brother-in-law, her sis-ter, the former Mrs. Mary Battey Bonney, having married the titled Englishman several years ago. Adrienne spent a great part of last year visiting Sir Charles and Lady Marston at their beautiful estate near London.

"The Bible Comes Alive" is a sequel to its predecessor, "The Bible Comes True," and is excel-lent reading, according to Mr. Wilson. He describes Sir Charles as genial, determined, active and blessed by vision—an Englishman who has made a success of what e undertakes and has developed interests that absorb and enrich his lelsure.

For many years his main ob-jective has been research into the origin of the Bible, and on this research with which his will ever be associated, he has lavished a fortune. His book em-bodies results of significance in a field of fascinating possibilities, results that could not have been achieved without immense sacrifice of time, money and energy on the part of many collabora-

Sir Charles writes, according to his reviewer, as so many businessmen write—clearly, carefully and to the point. Those who make no pretense to expert scholarship will enjoy the surprise of his picturesque discoveries. In fact, no one with any pretense to keeping himself up-to-date can ignore the conclusions assembled lucidly in this volume of vivid exposition—a volume of double significance to Atlantans because of their interest in the distinguished author.

ONE of the cleverest invitaone of the cleverest invita-tions Sally has ever received was that issued yesterday to the Pl Pi Club's "blowout," which takes place on Friday. The invi-tations, in folder effect, are of glittering black glazed paper, while the inside is white with red lettering and illustrations.

The invitation, expressed in verse, is as follows: "Come around me, my children,

And you shall hear, We invite you all From far and near.

"Bring on your dates
And your blowout, too,
To the Biltmore hotel, And this means you,

"On the 15th of April, In the year '39, From 9 to 12 We want you to shine.

There's nothing you can do or say to stave off your father's marriage to a young girl who's given him lief to believe what he wants to believe: namely, that he's as good as hew. The mere fact that he toys with the mere fact that he toys with the thought of marriage to a girl 30 years younger is proof that he's been saying to himself, "I feel as young as I ever did." The fact that he's speofing himself by repeating this fable is proof that he knows he's slipping; whistling through the graveyard as it were. Will be listen to reason as it were. One to two pints of milk daily. Two eggs. Liver (mammalian, not chicken

Green vegetables. Carrots. Two teaspoonfuls of cod liver

Two teaspoonfuls of cod liver oil twice a day.

Such a diet, Sir Edward says in his book, "Nutrition and Disease," (Oliver and Boyd, Edinburgh and London, '34) brings great improvement in early cases, however severe, and fa ors a stationary condition in more chronic cases, that is, the patients get no better but no worse.

Incidentally Mellanby explains

wherein the present criterion of malnutrition differs from the older criterion which most laymen and too many physicians still accept The old criterion was mainly a comparison of height and weight at a given age. The child who happened to be naturally small and thin, though perhaps in a good state of nutrition, was automatical-ly classed as "malnourished" or "undernourished" by that criterion. The present concept of good nutrition, as Mellanby graphically describes it, is rather something like this: "A well-grown, healthy-looking child with badly formed and carious teeth ought to be re-garded as suffering or having suf-fered from malnutrition. The bones of such a child are probably also defectively calcified, but this may not be revealed by ordinary exam-ination but only by radiographic examination or by the greater ease with which these bones may be fractured. Similarly, a child with a goitre but otherwise well-grown and healthy is passing through a period of specific malnutrition." (Mellanby does not say, but I, Ol' Doc Brady, suggest that the specific deficiency in goitre, simple or exophthalmic, is lack of sufficient iodine and perhaps insufficient daily intake of vitamin D.) "The same applies to anemia. If we take these tests as criteria, a large par of the population of this country (England) is suffering from mal-

Some New Ideas For Decorating Living Room

Two easy chairs Ruth upholstered in this chintz, while the sofa got a dull russet tan material. The four Chippendale bridge chair seats were done over in dusty peach and a wing chair was covered in a pleasant deeper gray-green.

All the accessories were new in copper and in alabaster. Part of the lamp shades were in cream, others were of chintz. The cream, others were of chintz. The room has such a serene and restful freshness.

Triumph Is Possible Doctor States My Day

OverGreed, Hate, Horror

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—Easter Day, in a world where a great number of men seem to be thinking of destruction, and the resurrection of the Prince of Peace is celebrated. Some of His followers thought He had come to reign over an earthly kingdom. They found it hard to understand that He should die like a criminal in order that He could rise again within men's hearts, and live through the ages as the personification of love and forgiveness. His way was the only way to peace among men. He charted a way for the world, but He has not as yet won His kingdom. It still exists only in the hearts of some people, and the fight goes on. Every Easter we are reminded that it is possible to triumph over hate, greed, and horror, and that the Christ still lives and waits for His kingdom.

The other night I saw a play, "Family Por-greed, and horror, and that the Christ still lives and waits for His kingdom.

The other night I saw a play, "Family Portrait," which, just at this season, I think, is good to see. Judith Anderson gives a remarkable performance. To play as she does, must mean there is something within her which can soar above most ordinary mortals. I wonder if the part, itself, does not leave something indelibly written on the soul of the person who plays it. Leonore Coffee and William Joyce Cowen have written a very moving play. Wisely, the Christ, around whom the whole play centers, never appears on the stage. You see His family, His friends, the influence of His work, and you see Him through the eyes of His world. Curiously enough, His world is not so very different from the world today, and so I did not miss the costumes of other days. The casting seemed to me very good. Juda and Judas Iscariot stand out in my memory for the way they played their parts. I also enjoyed Mary Cleophas. Every family should have someone like her to bear some of the brunt of smoothing out the tangled web of family dissensions.

I know that the Connecticut Nutmeg is widely read, but perhaps some of my readers are not familiar with it, and so I would like to suggest that those who are looking for new ways to peace, get a copy of the March 30th issue and read "Peace by Wireless," by Irving Caesar. The difficulty is that in this plan, as in many others, nations must agree, or it will not operate successfully. Perhaps, when we are war-weary and sane again for a short time, this idea of using the radio to let the people of different nations really know what their neighbors in the world are thinking, on any given subject at any given time, might be a new way to peace. In any case, we should neglect no new idea. Everything is worth a trial. (Copyright, 1839, for The Constitution.)

Miss Holding Weds Stephen Wilhite.

BEEVILLE, Texas, April 10.-Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Marian Ellis Holding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Holding, of Valdosta, to Stephen Allen Wilhite, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Wilhite, of Pensacola, Fla. The ceremony was per-formed recently in the First Methodist church here by Rev. John N.

McKay.

A program of music was rendered by Jack Baxter, of Houston, Texas.

Mrs. Wilhite is a great-grand-daughter of the late John W. Cook and Frank Ellis Sr., early settlers of Bee county, Texas. Since early childhood she has made her home here with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Ellis, and was a member of the 1936 graduating class of the A. C. Jones High school.

Mr. Wilhite is a great nephew of the late George W. Saunders, of San Antonio, Texas, founder of the Old Trail Drivers' Association. He attended school in the Panama Canal Zone, and after graduation entered the civil service there, transferring to Beeville in 1937.

Naval Air Project With Banana River Facilities Voted by Committee.

WASHINGTON, April 10. - (P) Plans to build a major naval air 5.50 base at Jacksonville, Fla., with auxiliary facilities on near-by Ba-nana river, won approval today of the senate naval committee. It wrote into the omnibus air base bill a $17,000,000 authorization for the two developments. Of that, they said $15,200,000 would be spent at Jacksonville and $1,800,000 at the Banana river site.

The southeastern base had been eliminated by the house naval committee because of a dispute over the location. Miami and other southeastern cities made determined bids for it, despite Jackson-ville's selection by the navy.

Unanimous Approval. Last month a naval board headed by Rear Admiral A. J. Hepburn recommended the Jacksonville site for a second time. This location then was approved by the house

Senator Andrews, Democrat, Florida, said the senate committee, which met in executive session approved the Jacksonville amendment unanimously. Originally, the navy estimated the cost of the southeastern base at $23,978,000, but later trimmed the figure in order to keep the total authorization for air bases within the $65,000,000 approved by the budget bureau for that pur-ose.

Andrews said the budget limitation also prevented the commit tee's writing into the bill a $1. 000,000 item for development of facilities at Key West, Fla. He had offered an amendmen, for this purpose. Camp Foster Site.

If congress appropriates for the air bases, the southeastern facility will be built at Camp Foster, six miles south of Jacksonville. Carrier berthing will be provided at Mayport, where the St. Johns will provide an outlying seaplane operating base. The Hepburn board said this facility should be provided as an adjunct to any Florida site chosen for the major base. Senator Andrews said he understood the $1,800,000 would pay for only the preparation of the Banana river site, and that additional money would be necessary for hangars and other equipment,

What Stocks Did.

909 918 NEW YORK, April 10.—(P)— The stock market drew rallying ing issues raked in gains of fractions to around 3 points. A few more were up 6 to 9.

The turn-around was attributed principally to the speculative be-lief the list may have been over-sold last week when prices fell to the lowest levels since last June. Many traders who dumped hold-Saturday were said to have reinstated commitments for at least a short ride.

Covering by some "shorts" who had piled up pleasing profits in the past month was a factor in the day's upswing. In addition, size-able buying orders for American stocks from abroad in the forenoon was a bolstering influence. Markets at London, Paris and Amster-dam were still closed for the last of the Easter holidays.

Transfers totaled 1,640,080 shares against 1,640,570 in the two-hour Saturday session and 1,313,290 Thursday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 1 point at 42.6.

"You shall have tea before you go home," he added. "I am by myself. Miss Linton, take your seat by him."

"It is late!" he said, speaking short and with difficulty. "Is not your father very ill? I thought cried Catherine, swallowing her cried Catherine, swallowing her greeting. "Why cannot you say at once you don't want me? My father is very ill, and why am I called from his bedside?"

Now. Catherine Linion, he said, "stand off, or I shall knock you down, and that will make Mrs. Dean mad."

Regardless of this warning, she

"For Heaven's sake, Catherine, don't look so angry! Despise me as much as you please: I am a worthess wretch, but I'm too mean for your anger. Hate my father and spare me for contempt.

"Nonsense!" cried Catherine in a passion. "Foolish, silly boy!" With streaming face and an ex-pression of agony, Linton had thrown his nerveless frame along the ground: he seemed convuled dren, you see," said the scoundrel with exquisite terror.

Oh!" he sobbed, "I cannot bear Catherine, Catherine, I'm a traitor, too, and I dare not tell you!

My young lady stooped to raise "Consent to what?" she asked. "To stay? Tell me the meaning of this strange talk, and I will."

"My father threatened me," gasped the boy, clasping his attenuated fingers, "and I dread him!

I dare not tell!"

I looked up then and saw Mr. Heathcliff almost close upon us, you at the Grange? The rumor goes that Edgar Linton is on his deathbed."

"Yes, my master is dying," I replied. "It is true enough. A sad thing it will be for us all, but a blessing for him!"

"How long will he last, do you think?" he asked.
"I don't know."

"Becau-e." he continued, look-Ing at the two young people who she were fixed under his eyes—Linton home appeared as if he could not venture to stir or raise his head, and Catherine could not move, on his account-"because that lad yonder seems determined to beat me: and I'd think his uncle to be quick and go before him."

"Young Linton ought to be in own room, I'll not come near you: bed, under the hands of a doc-

"He shall be in a day or two," muttered Heathcliff. "But first—get up, Linton! Get up!" he shouted.

"I will, father," he panted.
"Only, let me alone, or I shall faint. I've done as you wished, I'm sure. Ah! keep by me. Catherine: give me your hand."
"Take mine," said his father.

"Stand on your feet. There now— "because if I stay, papa will be she'll lend you her arm. Be so miserable; and how can I endure kind as to walk home with him, making him miserable, when he—will you, He shudders if I touch when he—Mr. Heathcliff, let me

"I'm not afraid of you!" ex-claimed Catherine. She stepped close up, her black eyes flashing with passion and resolution. "Give won't you be candid?"
when you have it!"
"Now, Catherine Linton," he captured his closed hand and its contents. "We will go!"

Then he pulled her on his knee and administered a shower of terrific slaps on the side of her head. I rushed on him furiously, but touch on the chest silenced me. Catherine, released, put her two hands to her temples and looked just as if she were not sure whether her ears were off or on.

"I know how to chastise chilgrimly.

Cathy ran to me instead of Linton and knelt down and put her burning cheek on my lap, weep-ing aloud. Her cousin had shrunk Dear Catherine, my life is in your hands: and you have said you loved me and if you did, it wouldn't harm you. You'll not go, then? kind sweet Catherine! And perhaps you will consent—and he'll let me die with you!"

My young lady stooped to said the life with the life with your loves. We tried the kitchen is somewhere. We tried the kitchen is somewhere.

"Master Linton," I cried, "you know what your diabolical father is after, and you shall tell us or I'll box your ears as he has done your cousin's."
"Yes, Linton, you must tell," said Catherine. "Papa wants us to be married.

And he knows your papa wouldn't that tale; it shall all be laid bare!" that tale; it shall all be laid bare!" "The master said you can go to the Grange at once, if you are able, "It is something to see you so near my house, Nelly. "Take you with her, pitiful changeling?" I exclaimed. "You marry? Why, the man is mad. And do you imagine that beautiful young lady, that healthy, hearty girl, will tie herself to a little perishing monkey like you!"

Catherine was near distaught: she persisted that she must go

Then Heathcliff came back. "Your beasts have trotted off," he said, "and—now, Linton! get to bed. In a month or two, my you'll be able to pay her back her present tyrannies with a vigorous hand. There, to bed! Once in your

He spoke these words, holding the door open for his son to pass.
Then the lock was resecured.
Heathcliff approached the fire, where my mistress and I stood silent. Catherine looked up and instinctively raised her hand to her cheek: his neighborhood revived painful sensation.

"Oh! you are not afraid of me?" "I am afraid now," she replied, go home! I promise to marry Linton: papa would like me to, and

"Here then," he said, opening it and pulling her out. I rose to follow, but he turned the lock. I demanded my release.
"Be patient," he replied. "I'll send up your breakfast in a while. I thumped on the panels and rattled the latch angrily; and after a long time had passed, I heard a footstep: not Heathcliff's.

"I've brought you something to eat," said a voice. "Open th' door." Complying eagerly, I beheld Hareton, laden with food enough to last me all day.
"Take it," he added, thrusting the tray into my hand.

"Stay a minute," I began. "Nay," cried he, and retired, regardless of any prayers I could pour forth to detain him. And there I remained enclosed for five nights and four days, seeing nobody but Hareton, once every morning; and he was a mode a jailer; surly and dumb and deaf to every attempt at moving his sense of justice or compassion. On the fifth afternoon a different step approached—lighter and shorter; and this time the person entered the room. It was Zillah. "Eh, dear! Mrs. Dean!" she exlaimed. "Well! There is a talk about you at Gimmerton. I never thought but you were sunk in the
